Take a look at what you’ll see when you visit PineCone’s Music of the Carolinas Concerts at the NC Museum of History Daniels Auditorium!
When we get to the NC History Museum, we will need to find parking. There are parking lots and street parking available.

For more information about parking at the NC History Museum, please use this link.
After we park our car, we’ll walk to the auditorium, which is inside the museum.

Depending on where we park, it might take us a couple of minutes to walk up to the building.
There are two entrances. The main entrance on Edenton Street has stairs and a ramp.

Once we get inside, we'll walk past the gift shop and the museum info desk on our way to the auditorium.
If we come in the side entrance, the auditorium is just inside! This entrance only has stairs.
We might have reserved our free tickets in advance, or we might pick them up at the PineCone table when we get into the Museum. We might have to wait in line to go into the auditorium.

If we have extra time before the concert, we can explore the museum! We can explore the museum after the concert too!
When it’s time for the concert to start, we’ll head inside the auditorium. Music of the Carolinas concerts are from 3:00-4:00 PM, with no intermission.

There is no assigned seating in the auditorium, so we can pick our seats. Some people might already be sitting inside.
During the concert, we will hear musicians play their instruments and sing.

There might be videos that are played, and there might be presentations about the musician and the type of music they play!
If I need to use the restroom, it is close by!
We hope you enjoy your visit to PineCone at the NC Museum of History!
